CPO

CHIEF PRODUCTION OFFICER

GIÁM ĐỐC SẢN XUẤT

World-Class Production Management for Vietnam

Why businesses need to redefine the role of CPO in the new context?

Vietnam's manufacturing sector continues to expand. Yet production management capability has not kept pace with global standards in productivity, quality, and leadership sophistication.

While global players move toward lean, automation, and data-driven operations, many factories remain dependent on outdated experience, fragmented systems, and reactive management.

Costs rise. Scalability is constrained. Competitive advantage erodes.

This strategic gap calls for a redefined role of the Chief Production Officer (CPO).

79%

of enterprises identify production optimization as a critical priority for survival in the 2024 - 2027 period. (PwC Global Operation)

of global manufacturing leaders cite workforce volatility, cost pressures, and skills shortages as their top concerns. (Deloitte)

Today's CPOs extend far beyond factory supervisors. The role now encompasses designing globally benchmarked operating systems, safeguarding supply integrity, institutionalizing productivity discipline, and leading digital modernization. Manufacturing must evolve from an operational function into a core driver of enterprise value and global competitiveness.

A good factory produces quality products.

A great CPO builds sustainable competitive capability for the enterprise

NEW PRODUCTION MANAGEMENT FOR A NEW ERA

With more than 25 years of research and training business leaders in Vietnam, PACE Institute of Management has developed the "Chief Production Officer - CPO" Program as a comprehensive solution for leaders seeking to elevate manufacturing to international standards: lean operations, world-class quality, data-driven systems, and sustainable technology transformation.

Challenges of Production Management today

- Lack of standardization in production systems, heavy reliance on experience, limited scalability, and weak risk control.
- Large workforce but limited leadership capability, making it difficult to sustain stable productivity.
- Fragmented production processes, reactive improvements, slow response to rapidly changing market demands.
- Volatility in labor, supply chains, costs, global standards, creating significant transformation pressure for enterprises.

Comprehensive solution from PACE's CPO program

- Adopt internationally benchmarked production management practices, operating through data-driven systems and structured processes.
- Elevate leadership capability, optimize resources, and enhance productivity performance.
- Build lean production systems, improving efficiency, transparency, risk and cost control.
- Develop strategic leadership capability, enabling CPOs to anticipate trends and respond confidently to volatility.
